The Chinese would indeed be a nation of hypocrites if they did profess general hostility to the use of opium; but they foreign missionaries say for them, are two wholly different things; and the history of the past few months ought to dispose of the question of the authority of the foreign missionaries to speak for the Chinese. Serious efforts, have indeed been made to manufacture Chinese opinion, or to produce an artificial presentment of such signed by certain Chinese men and women; and the results of such canvassing for signatures among the converts have been gravely submitted to meetings and public bodies in England as the genuine expression of native Chinese opinion on which the English people

What hinders Christianity from spreading is a rather wide question. It is trifling with our intelligence to say it is opium or the lives of lay foreign residents: But there is some ground for surmising that the true obstacle is the missionaries themselves. It is they who excite the enmity of the Chinese educated people, which is itself a mighty bindrance to the reception of the missionaries' teaching; and it is by no means clear that in the subject-matter of what they teach orally and in writing there are not CCLOURED OPALS mounted in Plush, many "stumbling-blocks" for which the teachers are responsible. HE LIGHTS HIS PIPE ONCE MORE, Some fifty years ago the English ship Argor was wracked on a low-lying kay or sand I-land of the Bihama group. Only one min, a sailor, was thrown enfely on the beach by the waves. In his pocket was a tin tobacco-box, a pipe, and a flint and steel. Wringing the water from his olythes, he seated himself, lighted his pipe and with true British phlogen proceeded to consider his situation. The moral of which is that when an Englishman, having the means, refuses to smoke, he is in very bad form For example, here is a man who says, " I always enjoyed my pipe, but now I couldn't take a whiff." To be sure, there was a reason, and he puts it in this way. "Up to Michaelmas. 1837." he says, "I was a strong, healthy man. About this time I begin to feet bid at my stomach and had no relish for food. I had a Bad taste in the mouth, and after watin r I would ratch and vomit until the "ater one dont of my eyes; and so bad was this that my wife had to hold my had. "I now got weaker and weaker and had given up all hopes of recovery, when in the spring of 1839 a lady from London who was staying at the vicarage at Otton Belchamp heard of my condition. She called at Mr. Goody's, the madicine dealer, and told him to supply me with some Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup and she would pay for it. CHAPTER XXVII. - Continued. The pied & terre settled, John Crucival readily meenred the use of a railway arch, and then, appreciating the leverage of what our American cousins would call a boom, issued a mild poster: " JOHN JONES. " RAILWAY ARON 17. * Entrance free. No collection." This had the effect of drawing together at andience. He could speak fairly, and had often enough addressed his tenants and neighbours on public occasions. But it is one thing to confront a deferential and sympathetic audience—another to cast your pearls before swine; as he soon found out experimentally.

He had not said fifty words before a laugh interrupted him. Then when he flushed up, a type of Irishry. cheer arose, and he paused." " Hoot! He's nobbut a Cockney!" granted and northerner, contemptuously; the denizers of Cockaigns being apparently revolting objects

I am not work ing for pay, but simply for conscience sake, my oue object being to try and bring to Ferreesham that which it sorely needs—more light." He spoke with emotion, and the quiverings of a frame that seemed almost convulsed by feel-

I'm ne orator, and never preached a sermon in my life. I'vo asked you to meet me, friends not to listen to a Spurgeon, or an Aitken. or a Parker, or a Knox Little, but simply to get to know you. I want to be permitted to come and visit some of you in your homes, and talk things over quietly. None of you will be the worse for a friendly that with a sorrowing soul. He had now succeeded in getting round him a knot of supporters, and the more resolutely he showed fight, the more earnest they became. Presently this feeling of warmth began to spread, and the consciousuess of mestery nerved his speech. He was not like a man with a fad or a theme. He had a message to deliver, and was able to take for his basis Christianity, not as a creed-or jurable of contradictory creedsbut a fact. He began almost defeated; he ended with a win, for a number of honest people came Then he took their addresses, and wished them
